

PEACE AWARD

On Wednesday, our Year 5 Chaplaincy team visited Coventry Cathedral to share all that we have been doing at school to promote peace.

Last year, we achieved the Coventry Peace Award, the children were able to share learning opportunities from across the school that focus on promoting a world of peace and reconciliation.

The children spoke very confidently, and we were very proud of them!

They also got to speak to other children from Coventry schools to see how their schools promote a culture of Peace. They came away with some great ideas and are very excited about introducing some new ideas in September!

This guide highlights the risks of exposure to the sharing of intimate images online, and details how best to safeguard young people from this practice.

EMOTIONAL DISTRESS

Victims of the misuse of intimate images and so-called 'sextortion' (blackmail involving sexual material) often experience significant emotional distress. The threat of having these photos or videos shared publicly can lead to anxiety, depression and a sense of helplessness. This emotional turmoil can affect daily life, academic performance and personal relationships.

DAMAGE TO REPUTATION

Intimate images being made public can severely damage a person's reputation. This can lead to bullying, social ostracisation and long-term impacts on personal and professional relationships. If a blackmailer gets their hands on any intimate images, the fear of reputational damage can also make a victim far more vulnerable to ongoing extortion.

PRIVACY VIOLATIONS

Once intimate images are shared online, it can be difficult to quickly control where they wind up and who else sees them. This loss of privacy can have lifelong repercussions, including identity theft and persistent online harassment.

Do you have a child who is starting secondary school in September?

The next major step your child will go through in becoming an adult is puberty and big changes are happening in their brain. Our children may become more emotional. Puberty is an important step in your child's life but may be unsettling and they will need your support.

Coventry City Council with inourplace offer free on-line courses that can help

- ✓ Support your child in their move to secondary school
- ✓ Understand their feelings
- ✓ Focus on your feelings as you go through life as a family
- ✓ Understand the changes in their development
- ✓ Help make the most of your relationships

Some courses that you and your pre-teen/teen may find helpful during the transition to secondary school are:

- ✓ Understanding your teenager's brain
- ✓ Understanding your child's feelings
- ✓ Understanding your child's mental health and wellbeing
- ✓ Understanding your brain (for young people only)
- ✓ Understanding your feelings (for young people only)

Provide house rules and boundaries

House rules give a framework for what goes on in the home. When you involve your teenagers in deciding the house rules they will have much more incentive to cooperate. Boundaries about good behaviour still matter, particularly with regard to their safety and wellbeing. Choose which battles really need fighting and aim to stay consistent. For example, is it more important that they tidy their room or that they return home on time?

Help them build for the future

The media gives teenagers mixed messages about how they should live. Who your teenagers spend their time with and how they behave will greatly influence the decisions they make. Peer pressure may encourage them to have sex, drink, try drugs or spend more money than they should. Give them tools to use to withstand unwanted pressure, especially with regard to partners. Help them think about the qualities they want in a relationship.

They will talk about the big issues of life with their friends, but you are still the biggest influence in their lives. Make a point of passing on your values to your children to help them make good choices in the future.

When emotions run high it can feel as if a match has been struck. Our role as parents is to help children blow the match out.

Top Tips For Parents

The Teenage Years

Being the parent of a teenager can sometimes feel like taking a long journey with no guidebook!

Here are some tips to help you navigate the ups and downs of those teenage years.

Understand their search for identity

A key challenge for teenagers is to find out who they are, what they are good at, and what group they fit into. Whether it's what to wear or having the latest technology, the opinions of others, especially their peers, really does matter to them.

Keeping the lines of communication open often takes effort, but is important in helping your teenager with these challenges.

Communicate at their level

Teenagers are often uncommunicative. Sometimes they do want to share problems or difficulties with trusted adults but they don't know how to start. Try to be available when those moments come.

They are not always comfortable with face-to-face chats and can find it easier to talk to you while you are doing something else. Often, all they want is to be able to let off steam and say exactly how they feel. At times like this you don't need to come up with clever answers.

Give them a sense of belonging

Teenagers need a secure base from which to explore the world and come back to when they need an anchor. Family traditions, such as special birthday celebrations, create a sense of belonging and identity. Eating together is also a great way to stay connected and build strong relationships.

Give them support

There are challenges for teenagers to cope with as their bodies change and pressure at school increases. Reassure your teenager about their own physical development – everybody's timetable is unique. Go along to parents' evenings and school events and, if possible, try to provide somewhere quiet where they can get their homework done.

Help build their self-esteem

A teenager's self-esteem is fragile and easily damaged. We can show them we love and accept them, even if we don't always like what they do. Focus on their achievements, not their mistakes. Look for specific things you can praise – and catch them doing something right!

Try to understand them

Teenagers need to feel understood. When they are feeling low or expressing themselves in an inappropriate way, think about what it must feel like to be them in that moment and try to see a situation through their eyes.

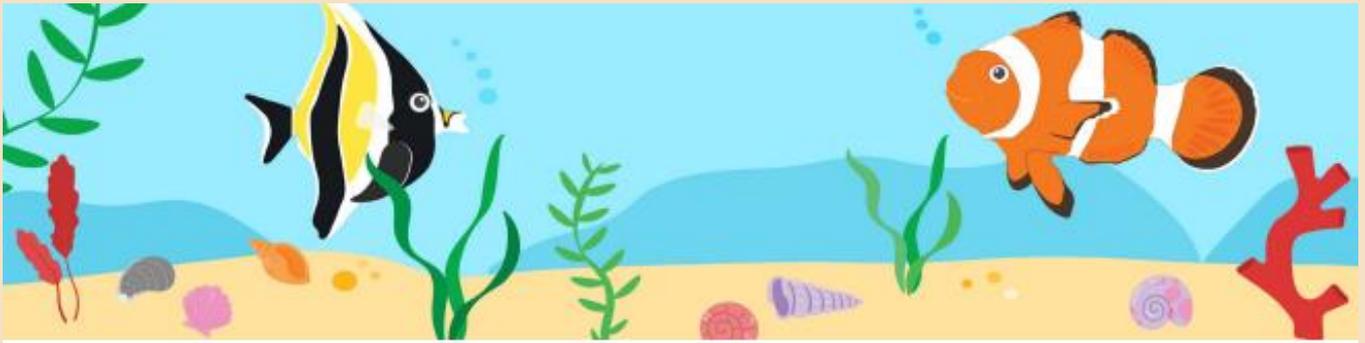

This doesn't mean we necessarily have to agree with their behaviour or views, but it shows we care about what's going on in their world and are trying to help.

Help them develop independence

Teenagers need to become independent. Our job, over time, is to change from 'controller' to 'consultant'.

Handing over control bit by bit for decisions affecting their own lives encourages them to take responsibility for their actions and learn from their mistakes.

Every artwork a memory

PAINT FOR COVENTRY

KIDS

Coventry Citizens Advice will be exhibiting and auctioning artworks created by school children in Coventry. Come and admire these magnificent creations at the Herbert Art Gallery from 2nd to 7th of July.

With each artwork we create, our mission is to alleviate poverty for Coventry's children and to create meaningful memories during their school holidays.

During school holidays, reduced care provisions disproportionately affect low-income families. Through the funds raised, our goal is to assemble up to 1000 packs comprising clothing, toys, and food vouchers for children from families in Coventry - providing crucial support to those in greatest need precisely when it's most needed.

Read more about it on our gofundme page.
